One of the first metrics that users and brands look at to determine account influence is your follower count, mostly because it is front and center for everyone to see. Even so, there is no set Instagram follower number to make money in 2018 that works for every influencer in every niche. In today's post, I am going to go over how to approach your follower count and when should you monetize them.

How many followers do you need to make money on Instagram?

For instance, imagine you had $100 and wanted to make more money with it. You could invest it with a person who had hundreds of thousands of potential buyers at their fingertips, but you noticed that only a hundred or so were actually paying attention to what they said. Your best bet would be investing that $100 with someone who only had a couple thousand potential buyers, but they are all constantly paying attention to what they say.

Even though there is no numerical threshold you have to cross to consider yourself an influencer and start making money on Instagram, that doesn't mean you should give up on growing your audience. Growth is always a good indicator of a successful, thriving account and once you have 1,000 followers, a lot of monetization opens up for you.
